LAST CALL TO PUT LOAN OVER

Committee Urges New England to Wake Up and Oversubscribe Quota

More optimistic feeling prevails among the Liberty Loan workers in State and nation today, for it now seems assured that the campaign nationally will prove successful. The total subscriptions reported by the twelve reserve bank districts as announced from Washington are $2,403,442,400, an increase of $120,000,000 in 24 hours.

New England will also, apparently, reach its minimum quota and perhaps show a fair oversubscription, but Massachusetts and Union in particular are still in the lull. This state's quota is barely 85 per cent. subscribed, and the city's record is even less satisfactory. Boston's net subscription is $15,182,000 to date.

The smaller cities and towns are showing renewed interest and enthusiasm, and $1 are now "over the top" on their subscriptions. There is still $4,000,000 to insure New England's minimum quota, and work will not be allowed to halt.

NEW YORK LAGGING, TOO. Following the appeal to the savings banks yesterday, the New England committee is taking new measures to insure a considerable increase on Page 3, Column 5.

By International News Service. —Copenhagen, April 30.—Serious food riots broke out at Cracow, in Austria-Hungary, due to lack of food according to advices from Berlin today, quoting the Vorwarts.

500,000 IN MAY AND JUNE DRAFTS

By International News Service. —Washington, April 30.—The latest drafts yet summoned to the colors since the initial call which organized the National Army will be made by the War Department almost immediately.

It is likely that the first call will make tomorrow, affecting the May contingent ordered out. The department made it plain in its weekly review yesterday that it intended to increase the number of men called to service at once. If the plans now considered are carried out the call for May will total 300,000 men while the call for June will reach nearly 500,000.

Army officers refused to discuss fully intentions in advance of official action by Secretary Dyer and President Marshall-General Crowder. They privately admitted, however, that the figures mentioned were approximately correct. Spokes after May will June will be reduced to 30 the contingent and 40 the limit. If it is hoped, however, to get as large a percentage as possible of the men who will be called this year into service at once, so that they can get experience in complete training before next winter.

London, April 30.—The village of Locre, a position of strategic importance on the Franco-Belgian frontier, has been recaptured from the Germans by the French, it was announced by the British War Office today. Other ground that the Germans had gained in the recent fighting on the Flanders battle front was recaptured by the allied forces. It lies amidst the hills from which the Germans have been vainly trying to drive the British and French forces.

They were recruited by Governor Marshall, Major Pitts and Liberty Loan officials.

They were frequently cheered by the general public. Their full French contingent, seen in steel helmets, enthusiastically to their influence the Liberty Loan party which they are looking in defense of their own country and of world liberty.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush
Kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment you back hurts or kidney even acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer irritating, thus ending bladder discomfort.

Salts cannot, however, make a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs active, avoiding serious kidney disease—Advertisement.

SALVATION ARMY HUSSEIN'S DEWET SOLDIERS

Life in a Salvation Army hut behind the lines in France is vividly described by Miss Stella Young of Chelsea, in a letter received recently by Miss Young's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Young of Chelsea.

Miss Young is the Salvation Army nurse who figured in the noteworthy episode of the Red Cross hospital at the American drive on April 21. During the Hun drive on the American sector, Miss Young, with three companions from the Salvation Army hut, served coffee and cocoa amid bursting bombs and flying shrapnel.

Once Miss Young was gassed while once German fire in a house at Becheperre. Gas masks were worn and no harm experienced by the Salvation Army ladies.

NEAR FIGHTING FRONT.
Miss Young's recent letter is as follows:

"Blessed be the name of the Lord!"

"Dear Pa and Ma:
"What to receive your letter, did you get the letter I posted in London?"

"On the trip over we stayed in Paris one night and went sight-seeing the next day. Paris is 'some place' after another night at the Salvation Army headquarters we came on to our hut here. I went to a hut the first night here with two other girls who came from the training college in December. That wasn't very far from the Salvation Army hut here.

"After that first night we were taken to another hut where I am now. It is the worst of the fighting front, and the worst of the fighting front is the American Women is permitted to go. 'I had no idea of the things that were going on here. Another girl and I made the doughnuts in the kitchen. That day we made 2,000. We made also apple and pumpkin pies.

"We sell all kinds of things to the soldiers. Our 'for sale' articles include candy, figs, raisins, canned goods and handkerchiefs. Many other things are for sale, however.

FIRED IS BOMBS EGGS.
"On Easter Sunday we fired over fifteen dozen eggs for the soldiers. Last night it was wet and rainy, and some of the boys came in from a long hike and we served over a thousand cups of coffee without delay.

"The boys appreciate our work here very much, and I am sure they will. We had a meeting with the boys last Sunday night and they certainly enjoyed it.

"The lights here go out every night at eleven o'clock. It is ten minutes to eleven now. The reporters were in tonight and they were of our work, so we on the food and stories in the papers. Please send me the clippings and any magazines you have.

"We haven't very much time to ourselves here and so do not get much of an opportunity to write. But I'll write to my friends as rapidly as I can. I am well and happy here. Please do not worry over me, because I know that God will protect me and bring me home again in safety.

"I wish I could go home more often, but about things here, but I know I am forbidden to write many details under present conditions.

"With all the girls to write to me. With lots of love to all the folks. Your daughter, 'Stella'."

Fitchburg Soldier Full of Confidence He Will Return Home in Safety
Fitchburg, April 28.—"The doctor was about me at the Fitchburg chicken can take care of himself, and I only two Americans came back from France after the war. I am a good boy to be one of them."

The soldier, who is named by Fitchburg with the headquarters company of the 1st Regiment in France, in a letter to his mother, Mrs. Julia Bold-Child, 56 W. 56 West street.

Among other things, he says: "We had a visit from an airplane this afternoon. The machine ran out of gas. They are about the best thing I have seen yet. I never thought there were so many people in the town as there was crowded around the machine.

"We have received our gas masks and steel helmets. We have them on our backs and we have them on our heads. The helmets on the parade would have the launch of their lives. The helmets would be a ton of lead, and when we wear them for a day we feel like diving in.

FINDS CUSTOMS STRANGE.
"We are getting along fine over here only the customs of the people are strange to us, but still we get along very good.

"I am in headquarters company, 1st Infantry, in the second position, which is composed of men for telephone, telegraph and signal work. They are working on the lines day and night every day. But still we find time to have some pleasure and a while. Our patients here are the most important jobs in the regiment and a great deal depends on us. We are the men of communication between the different companies and so forth. I am on the telegraph work and it is very interesting.

GETTING MORE AMERICAN.
"This place is getting more American every day. Why they have even got an ice cream parlor in the town! But they only have a cheap imitation, and half the time they don't have even that. One night another fellow and I went to the town for supper. We had a cup of cocoa, a couple of slices of bread and two fried eggs and some steak and potatoes. When we asked for the bill, all they asked for that food for two was 14 francs, or about $2.50. Just imagine what a price that is for a chicken dinner, and this wasn't anything but a common restaurant. Think what they would do to anyone and so forth. I am on the telegraph work and it is very interesting.

Simonds' Dishonesty Is Exposed by Chief Editor

Simonds, editor-in-chief of the New York Tribune, is a chief of staff of that paper because he found it convenient to publish in that paper of fraudulent patches, of attacks on American soldiers, picturing a few of our soldiers abroad, and because the Tribune insisted upon publishing editorial disbusiness office in the interest of private corporations.

Simonds, having a contract with Mr. Simonds for his personal services, refused to accept his resignation and endeavored to force Simonds to continue to write war articles for the Tribune.

Mr. Simonds had been engaged as chief editor, he felt that his dignity forbade his working in any capacity for a paper whose policy he had found both dishonest and hurtful to the interests of the war.

A Tribune has now sought an injunction from Vice-Chancellor of Newark, N. J., to prevent Mr. Simonds from quitting his office.

Mr. Simonds has declined for more than a month now to write for the Tribune or to have anything to do with it because of its dishonest and dangerous articles and its publication of foreign dispatches that had no foreign origin.

The words are those of the counsel, Lemuel E. Quigg, who added in court that the editorial page of the Tribune was "subject to suspicion."

The vice-chancellor granted a temporary injunction.

Uniform Places Obligations Upon the Soldier

An American soldier was recently executed in France for mistreating a French girl. The soldier's disgrace was atoned for by his death, and the American army washed away the scandal with the soldier's blood.

That man, if he was sober and sane, was guilty because he did not have proper respect for women.

The soldiers who are attracted to American should consider this man's fate in their conduct toward women, not so much because it involved his death as because it involved disgrace to the American army and to the American people as well as a great wrong to another human being. The soldier wants to remember that the uniform, which makes him a hero in the eyes of a great many women of a certain type of mind, imposes upon him the duty of acting like a hero in his relations with this type of women, particularly with this type of girl.

It is well known among students of psychology that certain types of girls, usually ignorant girls from the cities or unsophisticated from the country, are strangely attracted by a uniform. Even the policeman and fireman's uniform attracts them. Its fascination for them makes them easier prey to men who wear the uniform dishonorably. The fact that they are little fools and deserve and have the contempt of sensible people only increases the obligation of the soldier or sailor to treat them well.

Beware Overhead Expense

Copyright, 1918, by The Hearst Group, Inc.

What you have read above is the wise advice of our very energetic and successful friend J. M. G. "Overhead expense," an expression with which every business man is familiar, is something like that sword of Damocles, hanging by a single hair above the head of the tyrant's courtier. The court flatterer told Dionysius, tyrant of Syracuse, that he was a very happy tyrant. Whereupon Dionysius made the courtier sit down and eat an elaborate banquet, with that sharp sword hanging just above him. "That's how I live all the time," said the tyrant; "how do you like it?"

That is what many a business man might say to his friends who envy him. The "overhead expense" hangs suspended by a hair, constantly threatening to crush the whole institution.

Money is coming in, business is going on, there is money in the drawer and in the bank—but that "overhead" is there, getting bigger, heavier.

On many a business tombstone might be written: "Here he lies, buried under the weight of overhead."

The average man in business knows as little about the real character of his "overhead expense" as he does about his future eternal salvation. Many a man would be amazed if he could find how this interesting Topsy has "just grown" and almost swamped the business, like some old man of the sea.

How much do you spend for ACTION, real work in business? How much do you spend for things that have just grown and fastened themselves on your bank account and on your business? J. M. G. says few men could answer that question, and he is right.

What is true of overhead in business is true of overhead in private life, in your way of living, in your home. Expense gradually accumulates, until that which you would not have thought of a few years ago becomes necessary. And when you ask yourself at the end of the year what has become of your money, and of the part that you should have saved, you cannot answer.

Beware of overhead Topsy, who "just grows" with laziness, indifference, and "I don't care, it isn't my money anyhow," as her chief nourishment.

BRILLIANT WOMAN AND WEDDING REGRETS

By Winifred Black

SHE'S going to be married, the pretty girl with the clear mind and the broad, tolerant love of humanity in her heart.

I'm sorry. I suppose I ought not to be, but I am.

No, I haven't seen the man, and I haven't heard a word against him.

He belongs to the same social set as the pretty girl, he seems to be fairly well to do, and they say he's a good fellow in the best sense of the phrase.

He's even bought a pretty little house and has laid out a pretty little garden, and there's a cozy little room in a neat little garage, and all the wedding presents have arrived, and the bride's going to wear simple white, and there isn't going to be any wedding trip.

Her husband is exempt from military service on account of his eyes—he's nearsighted. But they think it will be the thing to have much of a splurge right now, when the bride's brother's at the front, and her first cousin—who would have been dead in love with her for years if he hadn't been her cousin—is on the ocean, and the groom's brother is in Africa with his own regiment.

Will She Be Happy?

The flowers are going to be fruit blossoms, just great branches of peaches and plums and cherries, and the refreshments will be very simple—oh, yes, it's ideal, the whole affair, and yet, and still, and nevertheless, and notwithstanding—I'm sorry.

Sorry for the man, and sorry for the girl, because I'm afraid of trouble ahead for both of them. She's sweet and gentle and home loving. She's good and loyal and true.

He's honest and faithful, and good-humored and kindly, and he worships the ground she walks on, and loves the air she breathes and thinks her voice is the sweetest music on earth, and he couldn't live twenty-four hours away from her to save his life—but she's clever, brilliantly clever, and, worse than that, she has a mind of her own, and a strong sense of her own individuality.

And that settles it. She'll never be happy in marriage—never in the wide, wide world.

Her husband won't allow her to be.

He'll think he will, but he won't—he can't, poor fellow. It isn't born in him, or in any man on earth, to be good to a woman who is cleverer than he is, and who lets people know it.

Will He Understand?

If she could only keep it to herself all might yet be well, but I'm afraid she can't, and the minute that husband suspects that she really isn't the superior woman of the partnership he will suddenly wake up and find that he has made a great mistake and that his wife never has understood him and never will, and I would be willing to wager, well—

Some day clever women will be happy—that's when men have grown more generous, more tolerant and bigger-minded than they are now. Until then, whenever I see an unusually clever woman thinking she's going to be happy as the wife of any man on earth I tremble—for her—and for the man.

That's why I'm sorry about the wedding.

Appreciates Editorial
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I hope you will accept, even at this late date, my sincere gratitude for your splendid editorial on the Italian flag in your paper of the 6th inst. I have noted with much pleasure that the AMERICAN has time and again shown proper appreciation of Italy's part in this war, and this time in urging so cordially a greater display of the Italian colors in this city has contributed materially to the already happy response shown to my appeal for more Italian flags.

GERMANY'S INSOLENT CONTEMPT OF US

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

WE are an unconquered nation! That fact is one of the highest assets that America brings into the war. Every other country involved has known its defeat. But over the story of our national life is written but one word—Victory!

It was our Alpha. It shall be our Omega.

It is incorporated in our blood; we breathe it in the air. It is the angel that goes before us, our pillar of cloud by day and our pillar of fire by night.

It has been said that this war found us unprepared. That is true in a material sense. But in a spiritual sense we had the best, the most telling, preparation that any nation could ask for.

We had the heroism of Yorktown, of New Orleans, of Montevideo and Chancellorsville, of Santiago and Manila Bay, and of clean, fair fighting on the side of the North and on the side of the South. We had the inspiration of Washington's lofty spirit of "noblesse oblige," of Andrew Jackson's grim determination, of John Paul Jones and his "I have just begun to fight!" of Lincoln, the epitome of every American ideal, of the chairmanship of Grant and Lee.

We have the record of an unstained national honor; no obligation has ever been a "trap of paper" to us. We have never bullied the weak and helpless; we have never used our strength for aggression. We have always fought fair, like men and not like mad dogs. And we have never been beaten!

Our Proud Record

We have sometimes been outnumbered in men, in guns. In all the paraphernalia of war. We have gone against overwhelming odds, but we have never been beaten.

And why? Because America has never taken the field in a war that she has not fought for an ideal.

The moment you do this you see that the present war is a battle of the children of light against the powers of darkness, the forces of allied freedom and democracy against the Hun idea and everything that the word Hun stands for.

And Hun throughout the world has come to be recognized as but another name for Autocracy, Militarism, Barbarism, Brutality, Intrigue, Disregard of Treaties. In the Hun brain originated the idea of liquid fire, of poison gases, of bombing helpless women and little children, of torpedoing passenger ships, of desecrating and destroying the monuments of the ages, of heathen and unthinkable cruelties to prisoners, of all the loathsome and ugly that is included under that favorite term, "Schrecklichkeit."

It is a stupid idea that we can cow and frighten people into submission, that by cruelty and ruthlessness and slaughter we can terrorize and intimidate nations and so make conquest easy. It has been condoned again and again.

Idea Prevail

Babylon, with all her might and all her persecutions, could not subdue a little handful of Jews as long as they held to their spiritual ideals. Spain, mistress of the world, using every dark device of cruelty and oppression, could never overcome Holland's stout-hearted "Beggars of the Sea."

But the Hun train still fails to assimilate these facts. It is obsessed with the idea of might, of hate, of frightfulness, and these clouds befog its judgment. It blunders continually. It failed utterly in its estimate of us. Germany never believed in the first place that we would go into the war, or, in the second, that we would prosecute it with vigor.

This is no time to pause and weigh the question, to debate the advisability of investment, and whether you can afford it or not. You can't afford to do anything else.

At the present moment there is just one duty before every American man, woman and child—to buy Liberty Bonds. You can do without dozens of things you think you need, you can do without many things you think you want, but you can't do without America, and America can't do without victory.
